Journalism, M.J.

SCHOOL OF MEDIA AND COMMUNICATION (http://smc.temple.edu)

About the Program

The Master of Journalism program provides both introductory and advanced study for students who wish to begin or advance their careers in news and information, including broadcast and print reporters, magazine editors and writers, media managers, and those working in online news and information. Students receive instruction from award-winning media practitioners from the Philadelphia region and have the opportunity to study under a well-regarded faculty at a Research I institution. Students may find many freelance and internship opportunities in the nation's fourth largest media market.

Time Limit for Degree Completion: 4 years

Campus Location: Main, Center City

Courses are primarily offered at the well-equipped and professional facility of Temple University Center City (TUCC) campus, a location across from Philadelphia's City Hall and appropriate for a professional news training program. Some classes are also offered on Main Campus, 15 minutes away by subway, bus, or automobile. Parking is available at both sites.

Full-Time/Part-Time Status: Students complete the degree program through classes offered after 4:30 p.m. The degree program can be completed on a full- or part-time basis.

Interdisciplinary Study: The program encourages interdisciplinary coursework in areas outside the Master of Journalism program. Students can select courses from other departments if those courses are appropriate to the student's career goals.

Study Abroad: M.J. students may participate in the London program offered by the School of Media and Communication in the Summer and Fall terms.

Ranking: Temple University's Master of Journalism program is the only one of its kind in the state and one of just a handful of programs in the United States. The program is proud that it provides professional training within a University liberal arts context appropriate for individuals who seek to be leaders in their field.

Areas of Specialization: Coursework is offered in communication history; law and ethics; magazine writing; news and magazine management; and news reporting for print, broadcast, and online distribution. Specialized classes are also offered in computer-assisted reporting, documentary photography, electronic information gathering, sports writing, Web design, and other areas.

Job Prospects: The program is dedicated to training professional practitioners in mass media, newspaper and broadcast reporters, magazine writers, and professionals in emerging fields such as Web design and the Internet. The program also emphasizes critical thinking, development of specialized knowledge bases, ethical concerns, and historical context.

Non-Matriculated Student Policy: Non-matriculated students may apply up to 4 credits to the program requirements with the permission of the Master of Journalism Program Director and/or the Master of Journalism Committee. Non-matriculated students may choose to take JRN 5001 Crit Perspectives Journ and JRN 5002 Reporting and Writing I if space is available.

Financing Opportunities: The program offers limited Teaching and Research Assistantships, which are competitively awarded based on GRE scores, among other things. Applications for assistantships should be made at the time of application for admission and should include a statement of experience, areas of interest, and future goals; transcripts; and a curriculum vitae. Assistantships carry a stipend and full tuition remission for up to 9 credits each academic term.

Admission Requirements and Deadlines

Application Deadline:

Electives 1

Total Credit Hours 36

1 Up to 12 elective credits may be taken outside the School of Media and Communication. Courses are selected by students in consultation with their academic advisor.

Culminating Events:

Comprehensive Exam:
The purpose of the comprehensive examination is to demonstrate competence in three areas of study in the Master of Journalism program. Students request three major professors to submit three separate questions for the exam. Students must take Communication History or Communication Law as one area of the exam, but may choose two other areas from subjects studied. Students have a week to complete the examination, which is taken during or after the last term of coursework.

Graduate Faculty in the Master of Journalism program participate based on the student’s choice and that of the M.J. Program Director. Graduate Faculty members who write the questions also evaluate the answers. The examination is evaluated by two faculty members, each voting to pass or fail the student. If the members are not in agreement, a third faculty member reads and evaluates the examination and determines the outcome. The student must answer every question on the examination in order to be evaluated. Students must successfully pass all questions on the exam in order to qualify as satisfactorily completing the requirement. Comprehensive examinations are administered at various times during the year.
