Creative Writing, M.F.A.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS (http://www.cla.temple.edu)

About the Program

The Graduate Creative Writing Program is intended to provide fiction writers and poets with an opportunity to develop their craft and extend the horizon of their thinking about the genre in which they work. Graduate courses in creative writing topics and literature are the core of the program.

Time Limit for Degree Completion: 2 years

Campus Location: Main

Full-Time/Part-Time Status: Students wishing to pursue this degree part-time are advised to contact the Program Director to discuss this option. It is not possible to complete this degree without taking classes during the day.

Interdisciplinary Study: Students may take their elective course in a department outside of the English Department with permission of the Program Director.

Study Abroad: Creative Writing students may apply to attend a 6-credit seminar in Art and Culture offered in Rome during the Summer. The seminar entails an intensive program of classwork, field trips, and guest lectures.

Areas of Specialization: The program provides a combination of small, intensive workshops in poetry and fiction, in addition to one-on-one tutorials and special topics courses in Creative Writing. Temple has an excellent faculty of writers in both genres, representing a wide range of aesthetics. To learn more about the faculty, see www.cla.temple.edu/english/creativewriting/faculty/.

Job Prospects: Graduates have extended their education and earned Ph.D.’s in English and Creative Writing and are now professors. Others have gone on to become librarians, editors in the field of publishing, arts administrators, journalists, web writers, grant writers, primary and secondary school teachers, and more. Books written by our graduates have been published by trade and small presses and cover all genres. These works have won grants, prizes, and residencies.

Non-Matriculated Student Policy: Non-matriculated students are very rarely permitted to take courses within the degree program.

Financing Opportunities: Students are encouraged to apply for a teaching assistantship, which includes a tuition waiver and a stipend for the nine months of the academic year. Conditions of the award are determined by the graduate student union contract with Temple University and currently require recipients to do a combination of teaching and other assignments. Assistantship applications are submitted along with admissions applications by December 15.

Culminating Events:

Comprehensive Examination:
The comprehensive examination is intended to give students an opportunity to write about the historical and formal context of the literary genre in which they practice. Students are given an official reading list for their chosen genre at the beginning of the program. For the exam, they write a 10 to 15 page essay.

The exam is due between the third and fourth terms of the program on the Friday immediately preceding the day on which the Spring term begins. The paper should address issues of craft and aesthetics, but may include other points of reference. The essay should demonstrate a facility for critical discourse and indicate a breadth of knowledge of literary traditions.

Each exam is graded by two members of the Creative Writing Graduate Faculty. Exams are graded as either a High Pass, a Pass, a Low Pass, or Failure. Students pass the exam by writing cogent, well-argued, and stylistically polished arguments.

Master’s Project:
The master’s project is intended to be a work of fiction (at least 100 pages) or a work of poetry (at least 50 pages) that reflects an aesthetically and intellectually sophisticated example of the genre in which the student has worked over the course of the program. The project is due on the second Tuesday in April of the student’s fourth term.

The master’s project is graded exclusively by members of the Creative Writing Graduate Faculty. Two readers must agree that the project passes. If there is a conflict, the Director of the Graduate Creative Writing Program adjudicates the decision. A project defense is not required.
