

History BA

Overview

Using rigorous standards of evidence, historians tell meaningful stories about the past. In-depth historical study gives students important tools for understanding contemporary issues affecting their own lives as well as local, national and global events. The Bachelor of Arts in History, offered by the Department of History, enables students to develop skills useful for any career that requires high-level critical thinking, wide-ranging analytical skills and great writing. Our students learn to master large amounts of information, conduct in-depth research, contextualize evidence from a variety of sources, and craft powerful written and oral arguments. These strengths are a foundation not only for successful careers but for lifelong learning and civic engagement.

Our home, Philadelphia, is a terrific place to study history—not only of the city and its remarkable past, but of the world as well. Our courses take advantage of Philly's exciting past and our major allows students to take advantage of the many study abroad options available at Temple.

The History major requires twelve courses (36 credits). Students must take two introductory level courses selected from American and World history surveys. Students may opt to take two survey courses from either area or one from each. These should be taken as early as possible, preferably in the freshman year. The three-course sequence in research methods and writing should be taken in the following order: HIST 2001 The Historian's Craft, then HIST 3096 Intermediate Writing Seminar, culminating in the senior level course, HIST 4096 Capstone Seminar in History in which students develop a research and writing project on the topic of their choice.

Students must select two "American" and two "non-American" History courses. This requirement can be fulfilled with a combination of the required survey courses and the upper-level electives. (Note: HIST 2001, HIST 3096 and HIST 4096 may not be used for this requirement.)

In addition, students in this major have a high degree of freedom, selecting seven upper-level electives in history (numbered 2000+). Our majors take rigorous courses in subjects such as Dissent in America, The History of Nazi Germany, the History of Philadelphia, Immigration and the American Dream, and Cold War Africa. We have faculty experts in urban history, African history, Asian history, military history, gender history, diplomacy, imperialism, the environment and many other fields.

Undergraduate Honors and Distinction in Major

There are two ways to enhance your history degree by achieving honors within the major:

- Participate in the History Honors Thesis Program
- Become a member of Phi Alpha Theta, the National History Honors Society.

Students in the History Honors Thesis Program research and write an original history thesis. All students who have a 3.4 cumulative and history averages are eligible to apply by contacting the History Honors Thesis Program Advisor, Eileen Ryan (eileen.ryan@temple.edu). Note that this program is separate from the University Honors Program and is designed to complement that experience.

In addition to meeting the major requirements, students who successfully complete HIST 4934 Honors Historiography and Research Methods (3 credits, History major elective) and HIST 4997 Honors Thesis Seminar (3 credits, taken in lieu of HIST 4096) are eligible to graduate with distinction in major.

Phi Alpha Theta, the National History Honors Society, is open to both history majors and non-majors who have completed at least 12 credits in history and achieved a history GPA of 3.25 and a cumulative GPA of 3.10. Participation in Phi Alpha Theta is separate from the History Honors Thesis Program and the University Honors Program. For more information, contact the Phi Alpha Theta advisor, Katya Motyl (katherina.motyl@temple.edu).
