English, Ph.D.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

About the Program

The English program enjoys a high reputation for teaching and research in both traditional and innovative areas of literary history and literary criticism. The graduate program prides itself on providing students with the advantages of studying at a Research I institution in a diversity-filled urban environment. Temple University is the only public university in the Philadelphia area offering a doctoral concentration in rhetoric and composition.

The English doctoral program offers a curriculum that provides training in broad foundational areas while also allowing for concentration in more specialized seminars and in areas of individual student interest. For students entering with an M.A., the time to completion can be five years. Students with a B.A. may need an extra year, during which adjunct teaching may be available.

Time Limit for Degree Completion: 7 years

Campus Location: Main and Center City. Every summer, the department offers the Rome Seminar in Art and Culture.

Full-Time/Part-Time Status: In order to be certified as full-time, a student must engage in at least 9 credits of coursework each term or the equivalent in supervised teaching, dissertation research, or writing. In special circumstances, the department permits part-time enrollment, but no student is exempt from the guidelines concerning reasonable academic progress toward the degree.

Interdisciplinary Study: Students are encouraged to engage in serious interdisciplinary projects and to work closely with a faculty member engaged in research and publications projects that take them regularly into the areas of History, Philosophy, Psychology, the arts, and non-print media.

Affiliation(s): Affiliations include the Association of Departments of English (ADE) and the Modern Language Association (MLA).

Areas of Specialization: The literature faculty is unusually productive in both emerging and traditional areas of literary scholarship. The doctoral program provides options for intensive study in critical theory, cultural theory, film theory, interdisciplinary methods, minority literature, and women's studies. Traditional areas of study include Renaissance, eighteenth-century, nineteenth-century, modern, and contemporary literature, as well as rhetoric and composition.

Job Prospects: About 40% of graduates hold tenure-track positions at colleges and universities. A smaller number are non-tenure-track faculty, while some work in publishing, foundations, or corporate positions. Graduates tend to find placement in the Northeast, demonstrating that the program continues to serve and enrich the region as it has traditionally. Increasingly, however, the program's graduates have taken jobs outside the region in such locations as California, New York, Ohio, and Wisconsin.

Non-Matriculated Student Policy: In general, English graduate courses are open only to students who are matriculated in an English graduate degree program. However, students matriculated in another graduate program at Temple University may be admitted to introductory-level English courses at the discretion of the instructor. In exceptional cases, a non-matriculated student may request permission from the instructor to register for a course. Students who fall into these two categories must register through the Graduate Director.

Financing Opportunities: All applicants are automatically considered for funding in the form of a Teaching Assistantship, which consists of five years of support, including a research semester and up to $5,000 research stipend, along with tuition waiver, healthcare, and other benefits. Conditions of the award are determined by the graduate student union contract with Temple University and currently require recipients to perform a combination of teaching and other assignments. Applications are submitted along with admissions applications by December 15. The department makes funding offers on or before March 31.

Admission Requirements and Deadlines

Application Deadline:

Fall: February 15

To be considered for a fellowship and/or teaching assistantship, applicants should submit a complete application by December 15. Applications are accepted until February 15, although funding consideration is uncertain for later applications.

From Whom: Letters of recommendation should be obtained from college/university faculty members familiar with the applicant's academic abilities.

Coursework Required for Admission Consideration: The applicant should have completed an undergraduate concentration in English covering a broad chronological range.

Master's Degree in Discipline/Related Discipline: A master's degree is preferred.

Bachelor's Degree in Discipline/Related Discipline: A baccalaureate degree in English is required.

Total Credit Hours: 48

1. ENG 8900 is taken by students in their last term of coursework, after they have satisfied all 5000- and 8000-level course requirements.

2. Students select two advanced seminars at the 8000 level with the exception of ENG 8900 Advanced Study in Literature and Culture and ENG 8985 Teaching in Higher Education: Writing.

3. Students select seven electives in consultation with the Graduate Director and, in the final year, their dissertation advisor.

4. At least 2 of the 6 credits must be in ENG 9999 Dissertation Research.

Language Examination: Students must demonstrate a reading knowledge of one foreign language.

Culminating Events:

Optional Master's Degree:
Students enrolled in the Ph.D. program who do not already possess the M.A. degree may acquire the optional M.A. degree while continuing on to the Ph.D. Students who leave the Ph.D. program for any reason also can apply for the M.A. degree. In either case, the student qualifies for the M.A. by successfully completing 30 credits of coursework; passing the foreign language requirement; and writing a Qualifying Paper that demonstrates the student's ability to write perceptively, lucidly, and at length (4,000-6,000 words) on a literary subject.

Preliminary Examination:
The preliminary examination, together with successful completion of coursework, should demonstrate special competence in two areas. Students define these areas by writing a protocol and constructing two reading lists, one for each area. The protocol is an explanation and justification of the two reading lists in terms of professional aims. It demonstrates competence in generally recognized areas of teaching and scholarship and explains how the fields chosen will advance the student's research.

The preliminary examination should be completed within one year of finishing coursework. Students preparing for the exam must register for ENG 9994 Preliminary Examination Preparation. They should also confirm a time and date with the Chair of their Preliminary Examinations Committee and register with the Graduate Coordinator. The student and Chair receive confirmation of the time, date, room, and proctor for the examination.

The subject areas are determined, in advance, by the student and the Preliminary Examinations Committee. The exam consists of written and oral components. The written exam is normally taken in two sessions. The questions for each session generally do not exceed five, from which the student chooses two. Members of the student's Preliminary Examinations Committee write the questions for the preliminary exam. All members of the Preliminary Examinations Committee read the entire written examination and issue a grade of Pass or Fail. The essays are judged on the basis of their demonstrable mastery of the material on the list and their analytical strength. If two members of the committee grade the exam as failed, the student does not pass the written examination. Students failing the exam retake the entire exam no later than the following academic term. Students who fail the written examination twice are dismissed from the program.

After passing the written exam, the student proceeds to a one-hour oral exam. The oral must be held no more than three weeks after taking the written examination. At the oral, students should demonstrate their competence in both exam fields. They have the opportunity to discuss their written essays. The exam must be graded Pass or Fail. If the student fails the oral exam, it may be retaken once no later than the following academic term. Students who fail the oral examination twice are dismissed from the program. If the committee finds that the student’s combined performance on both the written and oral portions of the preliminary examination is exceptionally meritorious, the committee may acknowledge this by including the designation Preliminary Examinations Honors.

Dissertation Proposal:
The dissertation proposal should:

- identify the key issues to be investigated;
- demonstrate an awareness of the relevant scholarship in the field; and
- provide a detailed outline of the proposed dissertation.

Dissertation:

The dissertation should demonstrate the student's ability to conceive, research, and write a scholarly project of at least 150 pages. The student's doctoral research is overseen by the Doctoral Advisory Committee, which consists of at least three Graduate Faculty members. Two members, including the Chair, must be from the English Department. Committee compositions must be approved by the department's graduate committee. The Chair is responsible for overseeing and guiding the student's progress; coordinating the responses of the committee members; and informing the student of her/his academic progress.

The Dissertation Examining Committee evaluates the student's dissertation and oral defense, including the student's ability to express verbally her/his research question, methodological approach, primary findings, and implications. This committee comprises the Doctoral Advisory Committee and at least one additional Graduate Faculty member from outside the English Department. The Outside Examiner should be identified no later than the beginning of the term in which the student will defend the dissertation. The committee votes to pass or fail the dissertation and the defense at the conclusion of the public presentation.

If a student wishes to change a member of a committee, the new member must be approved by the department's graduate executive committee and registered with the Graduate Coordinator and the Graduate School.

Students who are preparing to defend their dissertation should confirm a time and date with their Dissertation Examining Committee and register with the Graduate Coordinator at least 15 days before the defense is to be scheduled. The Graduate Coordinator arranges the time, date, and room. After the Graduate Coordinator has made the arrangements, the student must send to the Graduate School a completed 'Announcement of Dissertation Defense' form, found in TPortal under the Tools tab within “University Forms,” at least 10 working days before the defense. The department posts notices announcing the defense.

ENG 5001. Introduction to Graduate Study in English. 3 Credit Hours.
This course offers practice in a variety of written genres vital to professional life in higher education: the abstract, the proposal, the conference paper, the review, and the writing sample. It also requires students to learn (and intervene in) at least one critical debate. The course is designed to help professionalize graduate students who wish to pursue an academic job by teaching the tools and methods of literary scholarship, including library/database skills, archival research, historical research, critical theory, and textual editing. However, as a history and study of the profession, it should also be helpful to those wishing to learn how institutions of higher education operate and better understand the stakes and stakeholders who are committed to continuing humanities education. In addition to the writing assignments already mentioned, students will be asked to complete several shorter assignments, including an archive report, an institution report, interviews, and an annotated bibliography.
