About the Program

The primary mission of the Political Science Department's graduate program is to prepare students for careers in academia. The department gives equal emphasis to training students for both the research and teaching sides of such a career. Most students in the MA program intend to pursue a PhD either at Temple or elsewhere, immediately after graduation or after a few years of employment. Those who wish to pursue a PhD at Temple are strongly encouraged to apply directly to the PhD program at the outset of the admissions process. Some MA students use the degree to establish or strengthen credentials in teaching or for private/public sector positions, while others want to strengthen their background for applications to other professional degree programs.

Time Limit for Degree Completion: 3 years

Campus Location: Main

Full-Time/Part-Time Status: Students complete the degree program through classes offered after 3:00 p.m. The degree program can be completed on a full- or part-time basis.

Areas of Specialization: Our particular strengths in American Politics, Comparative Politics, International Relations, and Political Theory are reflected in the brief biographical statements of our Graduate Faculty members' research and teaching interests:

- In American Politics, faculty teach and conduct research on political behavior, political economy, political institutions, public policy and urban politics.
- In Comparative Politics, faculty focus on the issues of democratization; public policymaking; the role of the state in the economy; and identity politics in European and post-communist states, Latin America, China, and other developing nations.
- In International Relations, faculty emphasize the various theoretical approaches to the study of world politics and the testing of such theories in the areas of international security, international political economy, and the study of international organizations.
- In Political Theory, our strengths cluster around the research areas of late modernity; democratic and normative political theories, especially those pertaining to political questions of social and economic inequality, globalization, identity politics and social movements; and the relationship between politics and religion.

Job Prospects: Most students in the MA program intend to pursue a PhD immediately after graduation or after a few years of employment. Some MA students use the degree to establish or strengthen credentials in teaching or for private/public sector positions, while others want to strengthen their background for applications to other professional degree programs.

Non-Matriculated Student Policy: Prior to applying for admission, students sometimes want to take courses as non-degree students. Those who wish to do so must first obtain the approval of the Graduate Chair in the Political Science Department to determine if the individual stands a reasonable chance for admission to the MA or PhD program. Then, the prospective student must visit the Office of Continuing Studies with transcripts from all institutions attended, including the one that conferred the undergraduate degree, to be enrolled in the coursework.

Financing Opportunities: MA students are not eligible for departmental assistantships.
