About the Certificate

The 12-month certificate program in Advanced Education in General Dentistry (AEGD) from Temple University's Kornberg School of Dentistry expands students' knowledge and refines clinical competency and judgment. The program is designed to accommodate recent dental school graduates, who function in the program as residents, as well as applicants who hold a D.M.D. or D.D.S. degree from a Commission on Dental Accreditation (CODA) accredited dental school. Dentists who hold a D.D.S., D.M.D., or B.D.S. degree from an international dental school not accredited by CODA may apply to the Advanced Standing Program for Internationally Trained Dentists.

The field of dentistry is rapidly evolving as new restorative technologies are pioneered to serve patients who live longer and have more complex medication and healthcare needs. The AEGD program takes students beyond the four-year D.M.D. curriculum and strengthens their knowledge base and clinical judgment, helping them to keep pace with advances in the field. While primary patient care provides the majority of residents' learning experience, diagnostic skills and the ability to develop patient-appropriate treatment plans are also enhanced through the didactic curriculum and weekly seminars covering treatment planning, literature reviews, and topics in general dentistry. Residents train to operate effectively and collaborate efficiently within cross-functional healthcare teams while honing their ability to provide emergency, multidisciplinary, and patient-centered oral healthcare to a diverse community of patients with a broad spectrum of conditions and needs.

Certificate students acquire robust clinical experience by working in the AEGD Clinic, which operates as a stand-alone clinic with a staff of dental assistants and hygienists. Rotations in postgraduate endodontology, implantology, and periodontology supplement the comprehensive patient care assignment in the AEGD clinical facility. Dedicated faculty, who are experts in their fields and who are full-time tenured members of the Department of Restorative Dentistry, instruct and support residents throughout their clinical development and treatment of complex cases.

Time Limit for Certificate Completion: 1 year

Campus Location: Health Sciences Center

Full-Time/Part-Time Status: Full-time study is required.

Job Prospects: Dentistry has evolved tremendously over the years, and more can be learned beyond the dental degree. Graduates of the AEGD program go into the field having gained a better understanding of economic impacts; evolution of technologies; new restorative techniques and materials; patient management; and pharmacology, including side effects and interactions.

Non-Matriculated Student Policy: Participation in the certificate program is limited to dental school graduates accepted into the program on a yearlong basis.

Financing Opportunities: AEGD residents who hold a D.M.D. or D.D.S. degree from a CODA-accredited dental school receive a stipend of $38,500. International dentists without a CODA-accredited dental degree should refer to the Temple University Tuition and Fees schedule.
