COLLEGE OF EDUCATION AND HUMAN DEVELOPMENT

Learn more about the Master of Education in Advocacy and Organizational Development.

About the Program

The interdisciplinary MEd program in Advocacy and Organizational Development is led by faculty trained in anthropology, education, law, psychology, sociology and other fields. Coursework is based in social science, conflict theory, and quantitative and qualitative research that develops students' skills in:

- diagnosing issues in organizations and communities;
- developing interventions;
- promoting community or organizational well-being;
- managing conflict and conducting negotiation or mediation;
- preparing schools, communities and organizations to advocate on their own behalf;
- building diverse and inclusive relationships and teams; and
- conducting research for an organization or community.

The goal of the program is to develop civic-minded individuals who support organizations, communities and nonprofit organizations through community engagement; informed research; organizational dynamics; and theory and skills, including rigorous study of advocacy. Classroom instruction and assignments draw on students' experience along with training in conceptual, theoretical and methodological applications.

Time Limit for Degree Completion: 5 years

Campus Location: Main

Full-Time/Part-Time Status: The degree program can be completed on a full- or part-time basis.

Interdisciplinary Study: The program has a strong interdisciplinary focus. In addition, the coursework concentrates on empowering and engaging all individuals in and out of formalized organizations, whether for-profit or nonprofit.

Areas of Specialization: The program features coursework in three areas:

- adult learning and training, which concentrates on developing and teaching instructional/training programs for adult personal and professional development;
- organizational and team development, which develops assessment, planning, facilitation and consulting skills to help teams and organizations design and implement change; and
- conflict management and dispute resolution, which involves developing models and best practices for positive conflict cultures and third-party interventions.

Job Prospects: The MEd degree in Advocacy and Organizational Development prepares students for applied positions focusing on advocacy, engagement and development within educational, community and organizational settings.

Non-Matriculated Student Policy: Students may take up to, but not more than, 9 credits of graduate study in the program before being admitted to the program. The credits transfer into the program, if the student is admitted. Students completing non-matriculated courses before being admitted to the program are NOT guaranteed admission.

Financing Opportunities: Financial support opportunities may include scholarships, tuition remission, and other financial aid such as grants, loans and federal work study.
