

Graduate Certificate: Secondary Education-Social Studies Education

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION AND HUMAN DEVELOPMENT

About the Certificate

The Secondary Education graduate certificate program in Social Studies Education is designed to ensure that our students graduate highly knowledgeable about learning and teaching as well as committed to pre-adolescent learners from diverse ethnic, economic and geographic backgrounds. Our program focuses on building deep content-specific pedagogical knowledge aligned to the breadth of academic standards and the wide-ranging developmental needs of secondary students.

The Secondary Education graduate program's Social Studies Education specialization aims to develop teachers with the skills necessary to create an informed citizenry with respect for diversity in a democratic society. The Social Studies Education specialization emphasizes critical thinking about social studies curriculum frameworks and materials; curriculum development grounded in teaching for understanding; and sensitivity around controversial areas such as race relations, gender, war and peace, equality of economic and social opportunities, and global interdependence.
