

Temple University Harrisburg

General Information

At Temple Harrisburg, you will find an active community of students improving their professional knowledge and skills. Temple Harrisburg is engaged in improving the central Pennsylvania community through academic courses, certificate programs and professional development programs.

The mission of Temple University Harrisburg (TUH) is to serve as the leading academic and professional development center in the areas of education, public policy and human services in Pennsylvania.

The campus location in the capital region allows the opportunity to share Temple's commitment to social justice, innovative research and community service with legislative, governmental decision makers and the public. TUH strives to support the university's role in the public discourse on social and policy issues through the provision of excellent professional development opportunities, public policy discussion and innovative research.

TUH is part of University College, Continuing Education and Program Development (CEPD), which has locations in Harrisburg, Ambler, Main and Center City campuses. Through CEPD, the courses listed here are also offered at all Temple University campuses.
