

Human Development and Community Engagement Minor

---

Overview

The Minor in Human Development and Community Engagement (HDCE) is designed for Temple University undergraduate students who have either a professional or personal interest in influencing the programs, policies and practices of schools, agencies, non-profit organizations and governmental bodies. This minor is also ideal for students who plan to enter occupations related to applied child development, such as child psychology, teaching, public health, counseling and social work. Courses in applied statistics and program evaluation equip students with the skills needed to evaluate and improve community programs.

Campus Location: Main

Contact Information

Undergraduate Advising, College of Education and Human Development
 edadvising@temple.edu

Kelly McGinn, Program Coordinator
 kelly.mcginn@temple.edu

Requirements

The minor in Human Development and Community Engagement consists of 18 credit hours in coursework from programs across the College of Education and Human Development.

Students must complete the following courses:

Code	Title	Credit Hours
Required Courses
HDCE 2304	Families and the Community	3
URBE 4496	Understanding Urban Communities	3
EPSY 2325	Statistics for Decision Making	3
HDCE 4333	Program Evaluation	3
Development Course
Select one of the following:		3
ECED 2101	Child Development, Birth to Nine
EDUC 2109	Adolescent Development for Educators
AOD 3317	Adult and Workforce Development
Communication Course
Select one of the following:		3
AOD 1166	Interpersonal Processes through the Life Span
EDUC 4441	Discourse Practices in Diverse Communities
Total Credit Hours		18

All courses must be completed with a minimum grade of C-.