

Entrepreneurship and Innovation Management Minor

Overview

The Minor in Entrepreneurship and Innovation Management (EIM), offered by the Department of Management, is open to all students and is a great complement to any Temple major. It empowers students to follow multiple paths in their professional life and provides the problem-solving skills and strategic perspectives to take one's career to the next level. The EIM minor prepares students to start a business, run a consulting, freelancing or independent professional practice, be a productive member of an entrepreneurial or small business and entrepreneurial ecosystem, assume responsibilities in a family business, or become a highly effective leader in any growing, innovative business or social impact venture.

Our EIM courses and programs are highly experiential and designed to be real-world relevant and high impact. Students will get out of the classroom to work on ideas and ventures about which they are passionate. Coursework focuses on a variety of topics that enable students to become successful entrepreneurs, high impact intrapreneurs and social change leaders. Students will learn how to operate with open mindsets, uncover high impact opportunities, develop innovative product and service solutions, quickly and affordably validate ideas, pivot as the world evolves, develop effective Business Model Canvases (BMC) and Business Plans, and successfully pitch for and secure funding. These skills are highly valued by employers and leaders within the entrepreneurial ecosystem.

Non-business students may also consider the EIM certificate.
