

Bachelor of Arts in General Program

(College of Liberal Arts)

Sachiko Horiguchi, Ph.D.

Major Coordinator

shorigu@tuj.temple.edu

Students at Temple University, Japan Campus may, in consultation with the Major Coordinator and the Academic Advising Center, design an interdisciplinary major in the humanities (art history, Chinese, English, Japanese, Korean, philosophy, religion) or the Social Sciences (American studies, Asian studies, economics, history, political science, psychology).

The successful completion of the approved sequence of courses will lead to a Bachelor of Arts in General Program. A General Program major allows students to benefit from all the academic fields available at the Japan campus and to create an area of study that embraces an intellectual theme, such as environmental and population control, human rights, war and peace, or moral and ethical responsibilities.

The Bachelor of Arts in General Program is awarded by the College of Liberal Arts.
