

Leadership Minor

Overview

The Minor in Leadership, offered by the Department of Advertising and Public Relations, consists of six courses (18 s.h.) which provide students in other Temple University programs the opportunity to better prepare for life after graduation by acquiring the knowledge and skills required to communicate effectively and to lead at the organizational, team and individual levels.

The goal of the Leadership minor is to help students understand that leadership is a communication and relational process, not a position. Viewed that way, leadership requires responsible, thoughtful reflection and action at all societal levels. That also requires competencies in being self-aware, in managing teams, in making ethical decisions, and leading with an intent to engender positive change.
