Historic Preservation Certificate

Overview

The Certificate in Historic Preservation, offered by the Department of Architecture and Environmental Design (AED), creates an opportunity for students from many disciplines who are interested in increasing their knowledge about architectural history and knowing more about how this knowledge can be applied in historical contexts in the built environment. This certificate is available to all undergraduate degree students, except students pursuing the Architecture major or the Historic Preservation major. Students majoring in disciplines such as community development where students learn to work with communities and public policy, art history where students are educated to understand the broad scope of art and architectural historical knowledge, or public history where students focus on the cultural dimension of history, may find the certificate's coursework is a valuable complement to their degree programs.

The Certificate in Historic Preservation requires 15 credits of coursework that includes the Architectural History survey sequence and core Preservation courses. The certificate gives students an overview of the preservation field and an opportunity to work on projects that address current issues of historic preservation in contextual settings.
